

Cold Weather, So Easy A Blonde Can Dress Right...The Blondest Style

By Blonde Danny

Week of February 3-February 9, 2014

Latest in Penn State Fashion:

- How to stay warm in this below 0 weather and still look great
- Why you should always look at the shoes a man is wearing first
- The least attractive yet most common look on campus

Tips for the Cold, Some at No Cost

Ladies for starters, keep your hair tucked under your sweater, scarf, or coat. Infinity scarves are great heat concealers so leaving your hair under them will increase your warmth for sure. Second if you stop wearing leggings that are thinner than half the tights I own, your legs will be much warmer. Jeans are a safe bet paired with some tall socks underneath, or even over with a cute ankle boot. Last don't be afraid to layer button up shirts with collars underneath your sweaters. The more layers the better. You can get away with t-shirts underneath the button up and then a sweater because the look is meant to look bumpy and somewhat sloppy. What a lot of girls tend to not utilize anymore though are tights. They are my favorite piece of clothing no doubt, and why? They make it possible for you to utilize your entire wardrobe at all times of the year. Tights work with not only dresses and skirts but shorts as well. Still not warm enough for you? Buy opaque or even just layer thigh high socks to add even more to the outfit as well as warmth.

Photo: Jacob Skoglund

What Shoes Say About College Boys

Shoes are a very important key as to tell how a man is going to be. This may sound crazy but let me explain. The idea of hipster is essentially a pack of lone wolves. They all think they're individuals but they all follow the same lead. You would typically see a "hipster" in a skate type of shoe such as vans or even Toms.

These boys are most of the time outgoing and friendly. Boys who wear Jordan's and Air Force One's (which I thought became extinct until my arrival at Penn State) may be a bit cockier than your hipsters. They're the ones who always hit on girls at any time of the day because it may be their only chance to. What I mean as the only chance is say perhaps you see a boy wearing Tim's or boat shoes. They are a whole different crowd, being frat boy. Frat boys don't have to worry about seeing a girl at random being their only chance here at Penn State. Seeing that 75% of our campus drinks and there are over 50 frat houses, I think these boys know to hold their tongues and dress the part so girls come to them for the invites. Lastly, the type of boys you should be hunting down is the ones that wear a boot other than Tim's. It's not like nice boots are out of reach for them they just choose to dress poorly. I personally know that Clark's, a quality leather boot sold downtown at Barefoot for men is cheaper than your typical tacky pair of Jordan's. To sum up what this means, a man who cares to pay attention to him-self will typically pay more attention to you in the case that you connect socially. So look for boys in the boots and I don't mean Tim's!

Why You Must Stay Away From Sweats...

Girls: A lot of us here are hopeless romantics all waiting to meet our future hunk like a lot of college kiddos do, but do you realize the way you've been portraying yourself?? You have a bod under those lumpy sweat pants and hoodies! If you really want to do lumpy because it's "comfortable" (the biggest excuse for not trying) throw some boyfriend jeans on with a noticeable converse or fashionable sneaker with a sweater or lose button down shirt.

Boys: You're all lazy! No matter what you guys wear, it is always the same amount of pieces! Sweat pants, hoodie, and sneaks' are equivalent to jeans, a nice cotton shirt or thermal, and a dress boot, yet you look 10x better and self-sufficient when not in sweats.

