My version of a woman’s world is a child care center. It has a kitchen and several small meeting places for children and a teacher to meet and learn together. In Pizan’s “City of Ladies” a key point made is education. Education is important and I feel that everyone should be titled to earning an education. Education should be offered to both males and females as equals. Without being able to learn about the world members may feel that they are undeserving of knowledge making them feel degraded. My childcare center has all available equipment for a woman to express herself throughout the day. They have the tools to be creative through new ways of educating the youth and by having fun with them. It is important to give women the opportunity to be creative and express their feelings throughout their experiences. This is integrated throughout learning. I think that women are a source of knowledge and understanding and this is why I chose to create a child care center. I added a kitchen to my space because I feel that this is a form of art to share your differences. One thing that I have found throughout the years is that cultured food brings people together, weather it is cooking or eating. This allows women to share their background with children and pass on their experiences throughout their cooking. Pizan also mentioned that females became stronger through their nutrition. My center is designed to share experiences and bond with children in a natural and relaxed setting while making education become a priority to them. I think I would add a outdoor area, like a small fenced in area with plants and trees for the women to reflect about their experiences. This would give them a breath of fresh air while gazing at the beauty of the world. This would also give time for reflection. This would allow them to reflect on the what they are accomplishing and how they are changing the lives of the youth.
