Penn State is committed to providing a learning and working environment that is free from unlawful sex and gender-based discrimination and harassment. Discriminatory conduct and harassment, including sexual misconduct and relationship violence, violates the dignity of individuals, impedes the realization of the University’s educational mission, and will not be tolerated.

Campus Resources

Individuals impacted by sexual or gender based assessment or misconduct may have many different support needs, including changing academic, employment, or living arrangements. The University provides a broad array of resources and support services for students, faculty, and staff, including:

- Academic accommodations, including schedule changes, classroom modifications, adjustments to coursework or exam schedules, and retroactive withdrawals
- Housing modifications, including room changes and/or the provision of temporary safe spaces
- Employment modifications, including reasonable changes to work place, schedule, or duties
- Confidential survivor advocacy/support services
- Free counseling/emotional support
- Medical care
- No contact directives

AMNESTY and RETALIATION

The University strongly encourages students to report incidents of suspected sexual and/or gender-based harassment or misconduct. Students who report information about such incidents typically will not face University disciplinary action for their own drug or alcohol possession or consumption in connection with the reported incident.

University policy protects individuals from retaliation who report concerns regarding an incident of sexual or gender-based harassment or misconduct, or who participate in the University process.
